Safety Awareness

To most people, good housekeeping in the workplace just means sweeping up at the end of the shift. But good housekeeping is a lot more than that. It is defined as a neat and orderly workplace.

Good housekeeping is the foundation of an effective accident prevention program.

Risk – Slips, Trips, Falls, Cuts, Scrapes, & Burns

Hazard – Clutter, Spills, Cords in Walkways, Insufficient lighting

Safety – Make Housekeeping A Daily Habit

Who's Job is it Anyway

Maintenance departments are paid to clean and maintain our workplaces but Housekeeping is everyone's responsibility. We should follow three simple rules we were taught as children:

1. Clean up your mess

- Clutter
- Spills

2. Put it back when you are finished with it

- Everything has a place
- Leave it better than you found it

3. No matter how it broke, let someone know

- Damaged equipment can cause major problems
- Do not let a co-worker find it by ACCIDENT

Benefits of Good Housekeeping

There is a direct relationship between a clean, neat, orderly workplace and a safe workplace.

- Eliminates accidents and fire hazards
